Mountain Roots Food Project (continued)

Backyard Harvest: Provides free weekly home delivery of fresh produce grown on the Mountain Roots farm and donated by gardeners and farmers. May–October. Sign up via foodsecurity@mountainrootsfoodproject.org. Can pick up your extra produce in Gunnison; if you need food it may be able to be delivered.

Giving Garden: A community garden at 14th St. & Georgia Avenue in Gunnison offers plot rentals on a sliding scale according to your income. You can participate in “Common Ground” - people working together to grow more food with less time and effort, May–October. Drop-ins and people with no gardening experience are welcome; our garden leader teaches basic skills weekly.

Cooking/Gardening Demonstrations: From time to time demonstrations are offered to teach basic gardening skills and how to make a simple healthy meal from food grown in the garden.

INFORMATION & CONNECTION

It is always a challenge to include a category like “Information and Connection” since needs vary widely. Generally, unless something is targeted to a specific group – whether immigrants or young mothers – it is not included here. This includes political parties, lodges, book clubs, the League of Women Voters, and many more. We are sure that this is not an exhaustive list. Please use the email we’ve provided to help us keep it updated. Also refer to the sections on resources for immigrants, people with disabilities, seniors, veterans and youth for ways to obtain information and fellowship.

It is always a challenge to include a category like “Information and Connection” since needs vary widely. Generally, unless something is targeted to a specific group – whether immigrants or young mothers – it is not included here. This includes political parties, lodges, book clubs, the League of Women Voters, and many more. We are sure that this is not an exhaustive list. Please use the email we’ve provided to help us keep it updated. Also refer to the sections on resources for immigrants, people with disabilities, seniors, veterans and youth for ways to obtain information and fellowship.
